THE UMBRELLA LADY

Hardcover * February 2021

LS
Fiction

Left on the train platform of some strange village, eight-year-old Saffron Faith Anders is certain her father will return shortly, just like he promised. She holds out hope as the hour grows late and the station sets to close. She clings to her suitcase like a life raft. When a peculiar old woman carrying a large umbrella approaches and inquires about her situation, Saffron doesn't immediately trust the imposing do-gooder, but eventually does agree to rest at her house while they wait for her father together. Saffron's stay was supposed to be for a few minutes, hours at most. But confined to a house not unlike one Hansel and Gretel might have encountered, Saffron will undergo months and then years of transformation at the hands of the Umbrella Lady. One minute grandmotherly and the next a scolding schoolmarm, the woman cuts Saffron's hair to the nub, burns the clothes in her suitcase, and pretends that the photo of a young girl hanging on her bedroom wall is just a stock image that came with the frame. When mysterious letters arrive from Saffron's father, saying he has started a new family and will send for her shortly, hope returns to her heart. Still, as is the fate of all young protagonists in the world of V.C. Andrews, Saffron will learn that those who most claim to care for you will often hurt you the worst.

HEARTBREAK FOR HIRE
Paperback * July 2021

SQ
Fiction

Brinkley Saunders has a secret. To everybody in the academic world she left behind—including her emotionally abusive ex-boyfriend and frosty, condescending mother—she lost it all when she dropped out of grad school. Once a rising star following in her mom’s footsteps, she’s now an administrative assistant at an insurance agency. Well, that’s what they all think. In reality, Brinkley works as a professional heartbreaker at Heartbreak for Hire, a secret service that specializes in revenge for jilted lovers, frenemies, and long-suffering co-workers with a little cash to spare and a man who needs to be taken down a notch. It might not be as prestigious as academia, but it helps Brinkley save for her dream of opening an art gallery and lets her exorcise a few demons, all while helping to empower women. At least, that’s the line she bought when she took the job. But when her boss announces she’s hiring male heartbreakers for the first time, Brinkley’s no longer sure she’s doing the right thing. Especially when her new coworker turns out to be a target Brinkley was paid to take down. Though Mark spends his days struggling up the academic ladder, he seems to be the opposite of backstabbing adjuncts: a nerd at heart in criminally sexy sweater vests who’s attentive both in and out of the bedroom. But as Brinkley finds it increasingly more difficult to focus on anything but him, she soon realizes that like herself, people aren’t always who they appear to be... Sonia Hartl is the author of Heartbreak for Hire, as well as YA novels The Lost Girls, Not Your #Lovestory, and Have a Little Faith in Me, which was nominated for the Georgia Peach Book Award, YALSA’s Quick Picks for Reluctant Readers, Bank Street College of Education’s Best Children’s Books of the Year, and ALA’s Rise: A Feminist Book Project List. When she’s not writing or reading, she’s enjoying pub trivia, marathoning Disney movies, or taking a walk outside in the fall. She’s the Managing Director for Pitch Wars 2020 and lives in Grand Rapids with her husband and two daughters. Follow her on Twitter @SoniaHartl1.

GETTING CLEAN WITH STEVIE GREEN

Paperback * July 2021

JC

Fiction

Stevie Green, 35, has had it with binge drinking and sleeping with strange men. She's also chronically single, frequently disgruntled by the world at large, and very -- make that very, very -- organized. So when her mother asks for her help with a move to a new house, Stevie heads back to her hometown in La Jolla and decides to open her own business as a decluttering guru. She puts down the booze, adopts a militant daily schedule, and gets to work. In a world where KonMari is practically a religion, Stevie Green thrives with her 5-second "Yes or No" rules and promises of "Freedom Day" for her overwhelmed-by-possessions clients. But what about the high school scandal that she's still reeling from years later, and her feelings for her former best friend, Marina, which have only gotten more complicated with age? What about those miniature wine bottles living in her car's console? Are they offering her the fortitude to keep on the path of radical self-honesty, or beckoning her to throw away any progress she's made? It may be that the only way for Stevie to become La Jolla's #1 decluttering guru is to finally declutter herself. Swan Huntley is the author of THE GODDESSES (Doubleday, 2017) and WE COULD BE BEAUTIFUL (Doubleday, 2016). Kelly, Julia
LAST GARDEN IN ENGLAND
Hardcover * January 2021

KD
Fiction

Present Day: Emma Lovett, who has dedicated her career to breathing new life into long-neglected gardens, has just been given the opportunity of a lifetime: to restore the gardens of the famed Highbury House estate, designed in 1907 by her hero Venetia Smith. But as Emma dives deeper into the gardens' past, she begins to uncover secrets that have long been hidden from history. 1907: A talented artist with a growing reputation for her ambitious work, Venetia Smith has carved out a niche for herself as a garden designer to well-to-do industrialists, solicitors, and bankers looking to show off their wealth with sumptuous country houses. When she is hired to design the gardens of Highbury House, she is determined to make them a triumph, but the gardens and the people she meets promise to change her life forever. 1944: When land girl Beth Pedley arrives at a farm on the outskirts of the village of Highbury, all she wants is to find a place she can call home. Cook Stella Adderton, on the other hand, could not be more desperate to leave Highbury House to pursue her own dreams. And Diana Symonds, the mistress of the grand house and a widow, is desperately trying to cling to her pre-war life now that Highbury House has been requisitioned to become a convalescent hospital for wounded soldiers. But when war threatens Highbury, the three women--despite their differences--are drawn together by a secret that will last decades. In this sweeping novel reminiscent of Kate Morton's The Lake House and Kristin Harmel's The Room on Rue Amelie, Julia Kelly explores the unexpected connections that can cross time and the special places that can bring us together forever. Julia Kelly is the award-winning author of books about ordinary women and their extraordinary stories. In addition to writing, she's been an Emmy-nominated producer, journalist, marketing professional, and (for one summer) a tea waitress. Julia called Los Angeles, Iowa, and New York City home before settling in London. Readers can visit JuliaKellyWrites.com to learn more about all of her books.

In this My Fair Lady tale in reverse, a pampered Manhattan socialite is tasked with teaching a rough-around-the-edges, denim-loving “nobody” from the Louisiana Bayou how to fit in with New York City's upper elite. Violet Townsend has always been a people-pleaser. Not wanting to cause trouble for the prim and proper grandmother who raised her, Violet's accustomed to saying the right things, wearing the right clothes, and never rocking the boat. However, her dedication to her grandmother is tested when her grandma's best friend asks for a whopper of a favor: helping the illegitimate grandson she didn't know she had taken his place as heir to the family company by teaching him how to fit into upper-crust New York City society. Born and raised in rural Louisiana, Cain Stone makes it clear every step of the way that he's in it for the paycheck at the end. He has no use for the grandmother he didn't know existed and disdains Violet's every attempt to turn him into a suit-wearing, museum-attending gentleman. But somewhere amidst antagonistic dance lessons and tortured tux fittings, uptight Violet realizes she's not the only one doing the teaching. As she and Cain come to a begrudging mutual respect, Violet learns that blindly following society's rules doesn't lead to happiness. And sometimes the best things in life come from unexpected places. Emma Walsh had finally worked up the courage to confront her husband James about his alcoholism: how it’s caused her and their children to live in fear, and cemented her newfound conviction that their marriage is truly unsalvageable. But James never shows up to meet her as planned, and all her righteous words go unsaid. And unsaid they remain, because the next and final time Emma sees James is in the middle of that same night, when she discovers his body crumpled amidst the wreckage of his flashy car, smashed to its final resting place halfway through the back wall of their suburban house’s roomy garage. In the aftermath of the crash, Emma and her teenage children, Kelsey and Hunter, begin to imagine life without the looming, volcanic presence of their husband and father. As their friends and community mourn the loss of an upstanding business owner and family man, the three survivors’ grief is complicated by their knowledge that his legacy shines only because they were so willing, for so long, to keep his secrets--secrets that twist into new and unexpected shapes as the mysterious details of his last day of life begin to come to light. Funny thing about secrets; when you’ve gotten so used to keeping them, it becomes terrifyingly easy to create new ones. When the years of silence start coming down, no one left behind will ever be the same.

Kieran Scott has written over fifty novels for children and teens, eight of which have been New York Times bestsellers. She works as an executive editor at Disney Hyperion Books and lives with her family in New Jersey. SECRETS BETWEEN FRIENDS is her first adult novel.

Fiction

Hannah Bond has always been a bookworm, which is why she fled Florida and her unstable, alcoholic mother for a quiet life leading Jane Austen-themed tours through the British countryside. But on New Year's Eve, everything comes crashing down when she arrives back at her London flat to find her mother, Marla, waiting for her. Marla's brought two things with her: a black eye from her ex-boyfriend and an envelope she discovered while cleaning out the attic of Hannah's childhood home. Its contents? The deed to an apartment in Paris, an old key, and newspaper clippings about the death of a famous writer named Andres Armand. Hannah, wary of her mother's motives, reluctantly agrees to accompany her to Paris, where against all odds, they discover great-grandma Ivy's one-bedroom apartment frozen in 1940 and covered in layers of dust and cobwebs. As Hannah and Marla uncover clues about great-grandma Ivy in the nooks and crannies of the apartment, including a diary detailing evenings spent drinking and dancing with Hemingway and the Fitzgeralds and a weathered manuscript bearing no title or author they trace her steps through the city in an attempt to understand why she never mentioned her life in Paris before settling in Florida during the war. They travel from Shakespeare & Co. to Gertrude Stein's salon to Ivy's favorite day drinking spots on the Seine, getting lost along the way but ultimately finding their way back to each other.

Elizabeth Thompson formerly lived in France, has a degree in journalism, and, as Nancy Robards Thompson, is a long-time and beloved romance writer for Harlequin Books. Critics have deemed her writing funny, smart and observant.

Crowther, Gail
THREE-MARTINI AFTERNOONS AT THE RITZ
Hardcover * April 2021

AC
Nonfiction

Two of the greatest poets of the 20th century were once friends and rivals. Introduced at a workshop in Boston University led by the famed and famous Robert Lowell, two women formed a friendship that would spill into fierce rivalry, jealousy, and respect. The two women were Sylvia Plath and Anne Sexton. In the years that would follow, these two women would not only become iconic figures in literature, but also live parallel lives haunted by mental illness, suicide attempts, self-doubt, and difficult personal relationships. They used to meet at the Ritz where they'd drink champagne, eat potato chips and talk about "sex, poetry and suicide" before it all went downhill. Sexton was mad that Plath killed herself first. This will be the first book to not only uncover why these two women were so subversive but what it is about this subversion in both their lives and their work that has made them lasting, prominent cultural figures. Gail Crowther is a freelance writer, researcher, and academic. Ongoing work deals with Sylvia Plath and archival studies, examining the notion of the living archive, and ideas connected to the importance of dominance. She is also the author of The Haunted Reader and Sylvia Plath and the co-author of Sylvia Plath in Devon: A Years Turning (with Elizabeth Sigmund) and These Ghostly Archives: The Unearthing of Sylvia Plath (with Peter K. Steinberg). Gail divides her time between the North of England with her dog, George, and London. As a feminist vegan she engages with politics concerning gender, power, and animal rights.

BLACK NERD PROBLEMS

Hardcover * July 2021

NS

Nonfiction

When William Evans and Omar Holmon founded Black Nerd Problems, they had no idea whether anyone beyond their small circle of friends would flock to their little corner of the Internet. But soon after launching, they were surprised to find out that a lot of people enjoyed their views on pop culture and all things nerdy. Turned out a mass audience hungered for fresh perspectives beyond what was currently on offer in the canon. In the years since, Evans and Holmon have built a large, dedicated fan base eager for their brand of cultural critique, whether that takes the form of a raucous Game of Thrones episode recap or an eloquent essay on dealing with grief through stand-up comedy. Evans and Holmon are now ready to take the next step with the vibrant and hilarious BLACK NERD PROBLEMS essay collection, which snaps from Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles to Trayvon Martin with ease. Some of the topics include: -Mario Kart Reveals the Inner Villain in All of Us -When We Said We Wanted Representation in Hollywood and Also Said Stop Police Brutality, Having a Thousand TV Shows about Black Cops Was Not What We Had in Mind -Can We Finally Admit that Idris Elba's Stringer Bell in The Wire was a Trash Human Being? -Captain Marvel Shows Us How We Still Have a Hard Time with the Confident Woman Hero -The Resistance Members in Star Wars Gotta Be Fed Up AF Filling a wide gap in the market for pop culture critique from the perspective of people of color, BLACK NERD PROBLEMS is Bad Feminist for an audience unafraid to admit that they love anime, comic books, and all things nerdy. WILLIAM EVANS produces poems, essays, and stories that thrive across genres. What do you want? Sci-Fi, Middle Earth, and a mid-90s house party taking place in the Midwest? That's lite work. Prior to co-founding Black Nerd Problems where he serves as Editor-in-Chief, William has performed his poetry at the National Poetry Slam on eight occasions, making it to the finals three times. Williams work has been featured in Radius Poetry, The Legendary, and Joint Literature Magazine, among other publications. His poetry collection We Inherit What the Fires Left was published by Simon & Schuster in 2020. OMAR HOLMON lives as he writes, one nerd reference at a time. Recognized by Rutgers University's English Department as a distinguished Alumnus Poet, Omar has made five appearances at the National Poetry Slam, winning second place overall. Whether he's performing at TEDx, recording commercials for Laphroaig Whiskey, or doing press for Discovery Channels Shark Week, Omar's voice is one that makes a home across numerous demographics. Like A Beautiful Mind but with more comic book and movie quotes, Omar is able to find the correlation between pop culture and any body of work, using humor in his social commentary to make serious points. Omar's poetry collection We Were All Someone Else Yesterday will be published with Button Poetry in 2020.

Fairbanks, Amanda

LOST BOYS OF MONTAUK

Hardcover * May 2021

JC

Nonfiction

In March 1984, The Wind Blown, a commercial fishing boat, left Montauk Harbor on what should have been a routine voyage. Its four-man crew -- two of them locals, and two of them sons of the wealthy gentry that make up the Hampton's tony summer population -- instead ended up facing the hurricane-force winds of a Nor'easter that put them in a fight for their lives. It was a fight they lost. Neither the boat nor the bodies of any of the four men was ever recovered. The second-worst nautical disaster suffered by a Montauk-based fishing vessel in over a hundred years, the fate of the Wind Blown has become interwoven with the local folklore of the East End's year-round population. It is not merely a story of four men lost at sea, as harrowing as that tragedy is, or the fatal dangers of commercial fishing, but a tale of something far larger and more universal: a tragic tale of family, of brotherhood, of willful sons breaking free from powerful fathers, and of what happens when the interests of affluent and working-class families collide. With unerring specificity, journalist Amanda Fairbanks recounts the lead-up to the tragedy and delves into questions that have haunted the community for more than thirty years: Who were these four men and why were they so beloved? What happens to a community's working class when crazy money -- the kind that can buy a twenty-million-dollar beachfront home, or pay the more than $200,000 initiation fee for entry into the Maidstone Club -- takes over? How does grief alter people's memories? Why does an event more than three decades old remain so vivid in people's minds? In these pages, readers will get a glimpse into a bygone era of Montauk, back before mothers driving Teslas and Range Rovers dropped off their teenaged progeny for surf lessons at Ditch Plains Beach; before surfers were joined in the ocean by investment bankers and corporate lawyers; when it was still possible for fishermen to make an honest living from the sea. And before Wall Street and hedge fund money transformed the South Fork and Montauk in particular -- into a paradise for those who can afford it, and a lifelong struggle for those who cannot. Most important, it answers the question: how do memories of the dead inform the lives of those they've left behind? Amanda M. Fairbanks is a journalist who has worked in the editorial department of The New York Times, as a reporter for The Huffington Post, and at The East Hampton Star, where she wrote investigative stories, features, and profiles. Her writing has appeared in The New York Times, The Boston Globe, Newsweek, The Atlantic, and The San Francisco Chronicle. A graduate of Smith College and a former Teach for America corps member, she has two master's degrees from Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism, and currently lives with her family in Eastern Long Island.

Tucker, Abigail
MOM GENES
Hardcover * March 2021

KM
Nonfiction

Why do mothers love as we do? How does motherhood remake us? The answers, being pursued in cutting-edge labs across the globe today, have powerful implications for women, families and entire cultures. This book is for anyone who has ever wondered what rocks the hand that rocks the cradle. Motherhood is the most important developmental stage that adult humans ever undergo. It changes women on a cellular level, much as fellow mammals like orcas or hamsters are reconfigured from within. We become like babies again, growing our brains and learning. Our genes turn on and off. Our systems of reward and desire are rewired. We smell and see the whole world differently. Powerful and ancient as it is, though, scientists are now realizing that the maternal instinct not set in stone. It is fragile and malleable. MOM GENES explores how mothers different from other women, and why some mothers differ from others. Motherhood is an individualized experience, and innumerable variables shape mothers in ways that scientists are just starting to fathom. The maternal instinct is the most ancient of our mammalian drives, the one that defines us. And it's not only a women's issue; men also have maternal potential hidden deep in their brains. This instinct is the basic building block of all social interaction. In this ground-breaking book, Abigail Tucker explores the science behind our mysterious maternal impulses, showing how mammalian mothers are made, shining a light on the hidden forces that shape us as individuals. Abigail Tucker was the first ever staff writer for Smithsonian magazine, where she remains a contributor. She previously wrote for The Baltimore Sun. Her work has been featured in the Best American Science and Nature Writing series. She is the author of The Lion in the Living Room: How House Cats Tamed Us and Took Over the World. The first word of both of her daughters was cat.

Vanek Smith, Stacey
MACHIAVELLI FOR WOMEN
Hardcover * September 2021

KM
Nonfiction

Women have been making strides towards equality for decades. They've been entering typically male-dominated areas of the workforce for years, consistently surpass their male peers in university attendance and in grade achievement, and have taken to politics with a vengeance. But despite all of the strides women have made, the payoff is--quite literally--not there: the gender pay gap has held steady at 9% since 2000. So why, in the age of #MeToo and #TimesUp, is the glass ceiling still holding strong? And how can we shatter it for once and for all? Using Machiavelli's The Prince as a guide, Stacey Vanek Smith is applying 16th-century politics to 21st-century problems. Power is something meant to be taken--in the workforce and in all factors of life--and Stacey explores how women can effectively take and maintain power in careers that often cast them as second-best. Informed by current research, Stacey's own life experiences, and words of wisdom from a long-dead Italian philosopher, Machiavelli for Women is a Lean In for a new generation. Stacey Vanek Smith is the co-host of NPR's The Indicator from Planet Money. She's also a correspondent for Planet Money, where she covers business and economics. Prior to coming to NPR, Smith worked for Marketplace, where she was a correspondent and fill-in host. A native of Idaho, Smith is a graduate of Princeton University, where she earned a bachelor's degree in comparative literature and creative writing. She also holds a master's in broadcast journalism from Columbia University.

Chizmar, Richard, anthologizer
SEASONS OF TERROR
Paperback * March 2021

ES
Fiction

A graphic anthology like no other !In the spring, a young girl hears a woman crying for help from beneath the dirt in her backyard, but no one seems to believe her. During summertime, a young man inexplicably drops everything and begins walking deeper and deeper into the thick forest, where he happens upon a stone cottage with peculiar inhabitants. Come fall, four college students venture to a remote lake where they find that their only refuge from a predatory oil slick is a flimsy raft. In the depths of winter, behind frigid enemy lines, England's most potent weapon against Nazi Germany lives between worlds: good and evil, and man and wolf. Each embodying aspects of the seasons in which they're set—regeneration in the spring, overgrowth in the summer, decay in the fall, and mercilessness in the winter—these evocative stories explore four separate and perilous metamorphoses into adulthood as they toy with the outer limits of reality. Richard Chizmar's fiction has appeared in dozens of publications, including Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine and multiple editions of The Year's 25 Finest Crime and Mystery Stories. He is the New York Times bestselling author of Gwendy's Button Box (co-written with Stephen King) and the upcoming acclaimed novella The Girl on the Porch with Subterranean Press. He has won two World Fantasy awards, four International Horror Guild awards, and the HWA's Board of Trustees award. His third short story collection, A Long December, was recently published to starred reviews in both Kirkus Reviews and Booklist, and was featured in Entertainment Weekly. Chizmar's work has been translated into many languages throughout the world, and he has appeared at numerous conferences as a writing instructor, guest speaker, panelist, and guest of honor.

Stone, Oliver and Peter Kuznick

UNTOLD HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES (graphic adaptation)

Paperback * June 2021

JRS

Fiction

Now in graphic novel format! By "secret history," Oliver Stone and Peter Kuznick mean history that should have been but hasn't previously been available to the vast majority of citizens in the United States and elsewhere. It is cutting edge history based on the latest archival findings that challenges prevailing orthodoxies and asks questions not normally asked. By discerning patterns that have previously gone unrecognized and examining the most recently released classified documents, a new picture begins to form. This is not the kind of history taught in schools or normally presented on television or in popular movies; THE UNTOLD HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES will come as a surprise to the vast majority of American and global citizens. Complete with poignant photos, arresting illustrations, and little-known documents, this book covers the rise of the American Empire and national security state from the late 19th century through the Obama administration, putting it all together to show how deeply rooted the seemingly aberrant policies of the Bush-Cheney administration are in the nation's past and why it has proven so difficult for Obama to significantly change course. By analyzing and drawing conclusions about the past, the authors have discovered patterns and connections that will shock even the experts and astound history-lovers. Oliver Stone is an Academy Award-winning director, producer, and screenwriter. Peter Kuznick is professor of history and director of the award-winning Nuclear Studies Institute at American University and is currently serving his fourth term as distinguished lecturer with the Organization of American Historians. He has written extensively about science and politics, nuclear history, and Cold War culture.

Bly, Nellie

TEN DAYS IN A MAD-HOUSE

Paperback * July 2021

ES

Fiction

While working for Joseph Pulitzer's newspaper in 1887, Nellie Bly began an undercover investigation into the local Women's Lunatic Asylum on Blackwell Island. Intent on seeing what life was like on the inside, Bly fooled trained physicians into thinking she was insane—a task too easily achieved—and had herself committed. In her ten days at the Asylum, Bly witnessed horrifying conditions: the food was inedible, the women were forced into labor for the staff, the nurses and doctors were cruel or indifferent, and many of the women held there had no mental disorder of any kind. Now vividly rendered with beautiful and haunting illustrations by Brad Ricca and Courtney Sieh. Bly's bold venture is given new life and meaning. Bly's fearless investigation into the living conditions at the Women's Lunatic Asylum forever changed the field of journalism. A timely reminder to take notice of forgotten populations, Ten Days in a Mad-House warns us what happens when we look away.

Nellie Bly, born Elizabeth Cochran Seaman, was an American journalist, industrialist, inventor, and charity worker who was widely known for her record-breaking trip around the world in 72 days, in emulation of Jules Verne's fictional character Phileas Fogg, and an exposé in which she worked undercover to report on a mental institution from within. She was a pioneer in her field, and launched a new kind of investigative journalism.

Sciacchitano, Carl

R.E.M.F.

Hardcover * August 2021

ES

Nonfiction

Following the start of the Vietnam War, David Sciacchitano enlisted in the Air Force and volunteered to be sent to Vietnam. As an aircraft mechanic he was considered a R.E.M.F. (Rear Echelon Mother Fucker; a pejorative term in the military for anyone not on the front lines), but he nevertheless experienced the chaos of the war up close. After the war ended, David returned home but was soon sent back to one place he had hoped to forever escape: Vietnam. There he bore witness to the Fall of Saigon, the evacuation of 1975, and all the bitter last days of the war when the South fell to the North. Set against one of the most tumultuous events of the 20th century, R.E.M.F. is a beautifully illustrated story of trauma and love—told by a child seeking to understand a parent changed by war. Carl Sciacchitano is a writer and illustrator who has created comics for IDW, Archie, and Monkeybrain as well as illustrating the graphic novel The Army of Doctor Moreau, written by David Walker. He lives in Portland, Oregon.
